

I want this particular article Video Transcript

Say you found this citation, and want to read the full article.

You can't search for the title of the article directly in the library catalog. Instead, you need to search for the journal title.

This is like if you were searching for a specific episode of a TV show on Netflix. First you find the show, then you find the episode you want.

If no results come up when you search for the journal title, that means we don't have it. In that case, you will need to order the article through interlibrary loan.

For journals we do have, click on the result that says ejournal next to it in teeny tiny letters.

This page shows you the different databases that we have with access to the journal.

Check the coverage dates to make sure that the date that your article was published is covered by the dates that the journal is available in the database.

If the dates look good, click on one of the databases.

From here, you want to "search within this publication".

Now you can type in the title of the article.

And there it is.
