

Search for books Video Transcript

The library catalog is a database of the books, ebooks, music and videos that the library owns.

There are books for every course and department on campus, and librarians are happy to help you find what you need.

Search for books using the main search box at library.mills.edu

Note that this search box does not return journal articles. Check out the next video for more help on searching for articles.

For now, let's say you are looking for a book.

If you know the author or the title of the book, just type it in and use the drop down menu on the left.

Authors have to be typed in as last name, comma, first name.

Click on the title of the book you want to see more about it.

Note that the book is checked in, meaning that it is currently available.

It is located in the non-fiction section of the library bookshelves.

If the location says on reserve, you can pick it up from the circulation desk.

Either way, write down the call number so that you can go and find it.

If you don't know a specific book that you are looking for, but just want a book about your research topic, you can search for that topic using keywords.

Scroll through the results and when you find a book that sounds intriguing, click on the title to see more about it.

If the book is checked out, you'll see here when it is due back to the library. You can place a hold on it and we will email you when it comes back in.

You can use "more like this" to see other related books, or click on one of the subject terms that connects to your research topic.

If you aren't finding any books on your topic, try using different keywords to search, and contact a librarian for help.
